

Seven Counties Services Recognized as Volunteers of America “Community Partner of the Year”

Louisville (June 25, 2009) – Volunteers of America presented its third annual Community Partner of the Year award to Seven Counties Services at its annual meeting of the Board of Directors at the University Club in Louisville.

Volunteers of America works with Seven Counties in the Louisville area in a variety of areas including alcohol and drug abuse treatment and public policy advocacy.

Volunteers of America President and CEO Jane W. Burks also noted the close similarities of the two agencies’ mission statements. She said, “We collaborate on a daily basis to insure that people realize their potential.” Dr. Howard Bracco, President and CEO of Seven Counties, said in his acceptance speech, “You can’t build healthy communities without a partner.”

In addition to Dr. Bracco, Seven Counties was represented at the award presentation by Dr. Scott Hedges, M.D., Seven Counties’ Vice President of Medical Services; Dean L. Johnson, Seven Counties’ Vice President of Community Relations; Diane Hague, Director of Seven Counties’ Jefferson Alcohol and Drug Abuse (JADAC); and Harry Rothgerber, Seven Counties’ Board Member and Chair of the Seven Counties’ Personnel/Staff Development Committee.
